Culture and Community: Global and Local Visions for Communities of Faith

June 8 – Aug 6, 2021

3 graduate credit hours

Professor: Patrick Kraye, PhD

Tues & Thurs (1:30-4:00pm)

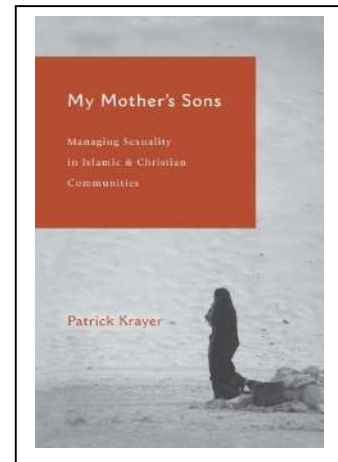

Location: Zoom

Course Description

This course is designed to enable each participant to reflect on their own faith and its expression as well as reflect on what it means to interact in transformational ways with members of other faiths. Drawing from the fields of philosophy, history, communication, anthropology, and religious studies, course participants will explore how to be internally life-giving to those within their own communities of faith and outwardly be ongoing, multidimensional, dynamic, divine-image bearers.

Dr. Patrick Kraye and his wife experienced the realities of taking the gospel across social, ethnic and religious boundaries in Pakistan and Afghanistan for almost 30 years among a very traditional, conservative, Muslim, tribal group. Dr. Kraye has served on the field in many and varied capacities from training outreach workers, consulting, teaching, pastoring, and serving in leadership, most recently as executive director of Interserve USA. He has numerous publications (some under pen names) including My Mother's Sons: Managing Sexuality in Islamic and Christian Communities, William Carey Library, 2013.
